

The Globe.

VOLUME LXXII

SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1915

NUMBER 20,266.

1915 — The Year Ahead — 1915

ARTS AND CULTURE

TALE OF THE TAPE

SHERLOCK HOLMES VS. TARZAN OF THE APES

SIMPLE FOUR-STRINGED LUTE SET TO INVADÉ NORTH AMERICA:

Familiar to Hawaiians as the "ukulele," an unsophisticated instrument is poised to bedazzle the attendees of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco, and our music expert Cornelius Canning III is less than chuffed. "I would sooner don a grass skirt myself than to have to ever have to hear that damnable tinkling tone again."

—SEE PAGE 7.

IMPLEMENTS OF THE NEW WORLD

RADIO BOX

In this weary time of war, we are weary of optimism, it is true, though there is one development on the horizon that, in our desire for distractions within our domicile, we must admit piques our interest. For many years, we have listened with much eagerness as seamen and amateur enthusiasts have evangelized on behalf of wireless communication, and now we have heard that the radio box, as they call it, may become more widely available. ~~It is a portable~~ If you will, receiving weather reports in Morse code in your very own sitting room! In times, we are told, we may even hear music ~~from the~~ ~~ear~~ Some more eager enthusiasts foresee a day when the device might enable citizens to hear directly from the leaders of this great country, or even His Majesty, King George VI. Naturally, we are cautious, but the edifying potential of the medium seems to us to be great indeed.

—ARTS AND CULTURE PAGE 7.